

1a. The flame thrower was a very important invention. It allowed soldiers to well for lack of better words project a flaming material at a target.

1b. The tank was also a very important in the way that it helped troops deal massive damage to enemies and gave protection to the troops inside the vehicle

1c. The machine gun was a gun that was high powered and had the ability to shoot a lot of ammunition in a short period of time.

1d. The submarine allowed travel underwater and provided a place to observe surroundings.

1e. The airplane, This allowed air travel. With a device such as this you can have an overview of the battlefield and bomb places.

1f. The 3" mortar was a new mortar shell that allowed more damage to be done with a single shell.

2. No mans land was a place between the trenches. Covered with dead trees and artillery craters no man wanted to be there.

3. Gas wasn't a weapon to be toyed with. You don't know that you were being gassed until you feel pains. Mustard gas was the most deadly. You cant smell it and it took around 12 hours to take its hold of you. After it does though you are sure to die within 5 weeks . If you get struck by gas you will blister and you would most likely vomit. To survive you need to have a gas mask on your face.

4. Life was hard for people in the trenches. Hardships and death was commonplace and everything was just overall miserable and not very fun.

5. 1 turnip, 2 carrots, $\frac{1}{2}$ tin corned beef, $\frac{1}{4}$ stock cube (improves flavor. The canned stews and soups would have had some flavorings. However we are not sure if this would have been available in the field kitchens in times of shortages), one or two biscuits (optional), 1 pint of water

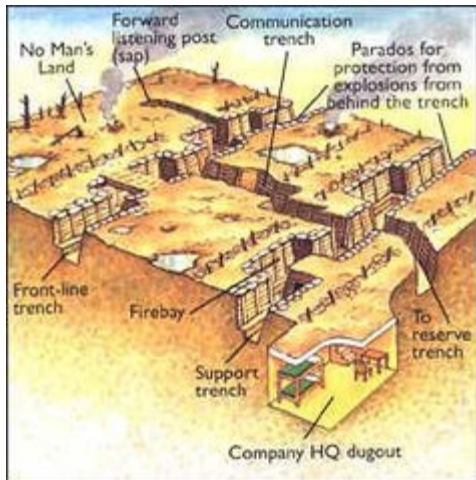

6. The red Barron was a ww1 pilot he had multiple victories and died by Australian and British serviceman.

7. It was both an offensive and defensive plan. It was the only viable plan proposed and it involved countries strategically choosing allies.

8. It caused Hungary to yell at the Serbians. They thought the Serbians killed the archduke Franz Ferdinand.

9. she was fascinated by all of the advancements in hospitals. She also liked working with gassed patients.

10. A dogfight is an aerial battle between aircraft. It involved multiple aircraft fighting to the death whilst in the air.

11.

12. They had people from the same area in the same group. I think this is good because then you already probably kinda know the people around you